Defendant also requests that $7,280.00 in cash seized during his arrest be returned to him. The government contends that the seized money, along with an additional $10,000 obtained during the course of the investigation of defendant, should not be returned but instead should be applied to satisfy defendant's restitution obligations. A restitution order "gives the government a sufficient cognizable claim of ownership to defeat a defendant's . . . motion for return of property, if that property is needed to satisfy the terms of the restitution order." U.S. v. Mills, 991 F.2d 609, 612 (9th Cir. 1993). Accordingly, defendant's motion is denied with respect to the $7,280 seized during his arrest and the $10,000 obtained during the subsequent investigation. The $17,280 currently in the possession of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, File Number 29B-SE-88714, shall be provided to the Clerk of the Court to be applied towards Defendant's restitution obligation.
